

James Amberman House
3110 Nova Scotia Road
Bel Air, Maryland 21014

This two-story gable-roofed fieldstone house is located on the west side of Nova Scotia Road near Creswell. It is three bays wide and two bays deep with additions on all sides; the main structure itself has also been altered. The house dates from the second half of the nineteenth century, when Jesse Cullum owned the property, but its form is one that was used from the eighteenth through the twentieth centuries.

The area around the house has a rich industrial history. According to the 1878 Martenet's Map, the Harford Furnace (the third and last in a series of iron furnaces on James Run), a grist and saw mill, and a textile factory owned by the Lilly family were all located on this part of James Run.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Located on the west side of Nova Scotia Road east of Cullum Road, this two-story, gable-roofed fieldstone house faces east and is three bays wide and two bays deep, with additions on all sides. On the south is a one-story, three-bay by three-bay, hip-roofed wing which extends one bay beyond the main house on the west and whose east side is flush with that of the main house. On its south is a single bay, gable-roofed structure covered in shiplap. A single-room, gable-roofed, stone structure (partially stuccoed) extends from the center of the west side. And, finally, a one-story, gable-roofed concrete block wing is attached to the north end of the house. Most windows have 6/6 sash, and there are three brick chimneys: two in the ends of the main house and one in the south wing. The latter^{chimney} and the one in the south end of the former have corbelled caps.

In the main house, the entrance is in the center bay of the east facade. Flanked by a window on each side, the door with "modern" sidelights has replaced and altered the original entrance drastically. There are two windows in the second story. A shed-roofed porch extends across the east facade of this section as well as the south addition.

In both ends, only two four-light gable windows are visible.

On the west, there are two windows in each story flanking the addition.

The south wing has been partially stuccoed. It has a central entrance flanked by windows in the east facade.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

In 1883, Jesse Cullum died possessed of 140 acres composed of four parcels of land: two totaling 52 acres that had formerly belonged to the 18th century iron furnace, Bush River Iron Works, and were part of the tract "Nova Scotia;" 93 acres of "Contrivance," "Websters Water Mill Resurveyed," and "Nova Scotia;" that had belonged to the Lilly family, owners of a factory on the opposite side of James Run; and 20 acres of "Nova Scotia" that had belonged to Isaac Wilson (of William). (The total acreage of the parts mysteriously adds up to more than the sum.)

The 1878 Martenet's Map indicates that Jesse Cullum owned a house on the other side of Nova Scotia Road from this house. The only structure on the east bank of James Run and the north side of Nova Scotia Road, where this house is located, is ascribed to William Williams. The 1858 Jennings & Merrick Map shows neither a road nor any buildings in this vicinity.

It seems, then that the house was built late in the 19th century. However, it has been severely altered and there is scant exterior architectural evidence to help date the house.

The area around the house has a rich industrial history. On the 1878 Map is listed the Harford Furnace - the third and last in a series of iron furnaces on James Run - on the west bank, where there were also a grist and saw mill, and a textile factory run by the Lilly family. Harford Furnace was on part of the lands owned by Bush River iron works, which was in operation from 1746 and 1776. A second furnace was established by 1837 and rebuilt in 1845. By 1876, when Harford Furnace shut down, it comprised both iron and chemical works on 5056 acres.*

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This little stone house in two parts, ^{body} facing south has one interesting roofline extending the hip roof from the wing out to a porch that is extended across the front of the main ~~house~~ house. The wing has further interest in having one log wall, the south wall, stuccoed.

The main house, two stories high is 3 bays by 2, ~~with~~ "hall and parlor" in plan, the center door enters one of two rooms nearly the same size. One of two chimneys inside the end walls has been removed.

The one-story wing, also 3 bays by 2, is set slightly to the north of the larger section. There a chimney rises to the peak from the middle of this part, (presumably from a cooking fireplace.

Maryland Inventory of Historic Properties Form

Inventory No. HA-1072

Name James Amberman House
Addendum-December 2010

At the time of the previous survey, the house appeared to have been suffering from deferred maintenance. In the years since that survey, it has been both rehabilitated and expanded. The front porch appears to have been rebuilt, keeping in the style of the previous porch with box columns and a matchstick balustrade. The south addition, which, at the time of the previous survey was a single story in height, has been raised to a story-and-a-half with a steeply pitched gabled roof with skylight. Despite changes, the exterior of the house retains architectural integrity.
